

Success Stories

Here are just a few job seekers we helped to get back on their feet and find work in the past year:

Carmen, a single mother with very limited English skills, came to Career Source after 6 months of unsuccessful job search. Her unemployment benefits were about to run out, and she was discouraged and frightened. Her counselor coached her on her interviewing skills, which slowly improved, gave her the encouragement to keep going, and continued to help her find job opportunities. Carmen is now happily working in a full-time job with benefits at a nursing home in Chelsea.

Ellen was laid off from a healthcare company. Although she had a variety of skills to offer, she lacked the computer skills to apply for many positions. When she came to Career Source, she had been unemployed for almost a year. Her confidence was shaken, and she was facing financial struggles.

Ellen attended several workshops and recruitment events, took computer classes, and worked with a counselor to boost her confidence, make her resume stronger, and find job leads. She recently found a position at a high-end retail store.

Leonard, a production editor and project manager, was out of work nearly a year when he joined one of Career Source's Job Search Support Groups. He also participated in workshops and one-on-one counseling to help him develop a more effective job search plan and improve his interviewing skills. Leonard was soon offered a position as a Communication Project Specialist, and is very happy in his new job.
